1 Introduction

1.1 Background

The Galileo programme is Europe's initiative for a state-of-the-art Global Satellite Navigation System (GNSS) completely independent of other existing or potential systems. Galileo is the largest industrial project ever organised on an EU scale, and the first public infrastructure owned by an EU institution. Galileo allows users to know their exact position with high and reliable precision.

- The products that people use every day, from car navigation devices to mobile phones, benefit from the increased accuracy that Galileo provides.
- Critical, emergency response-services benefit from Galileo.
- Galileo services will make Europe's roads and railways safer and more efficient.
- The programme boosts European innovation, contributing to the creation of many new products and services, generating jobs and allowing Europe to own a greater share of the EUR 175 billion global GNSS market (Source: GSA Market Report Issue V).

Furthermore, Galileo provides Europe and European citizens with independence and sovereignty, an array of environmental benefits and several new services specific to the Galileo programme (Open Service, Commercial Service, Search and Rescue).

The Galileo system has been designed to offer four high-performance services worldwide:

- Open Service (OS) Galileo open and free of charge service set up for positioning and timing services.
- Commercial Service (CS): A service complementing the OS by providing an additional navigation signal and added-value services in a different frequency band. The CS signal can be encrypted in order to control the access to Galileo CS services.
- Public Regulated Service (PRS): Service restricted to government-authorized users, for sensitive applications that require a high level of service continuity.
- Search and Rescue Service (SAR): Europe's contribution to COSPAS-SARSAT, an international satellite-based search and rescue distress alert detection system.

1.2 Commercial Service

The Commercial Service aims to provide features which go above-and-beyond that of the Open Service. This can be based on the data broadcast capability of Galileo E6 CS signal, allowing better navigation performance than that of the OS, and on the signal encryption feature of the Galileo E6 signal.

As per the EU GNSS Regulation 1285/2013 of 11 December 2013 [1], Galileo should "offer a commercial service (CS) for the development of applications for professional or commercial use by means of improved performance and data with greater added value than those obtained through the open service".

The Galileo Commercial Service (CS) is designed to deliver two services:

- A High Accuracy (HA) service offering centimetre-level accuracy worldwide through Precise Point Positioning (PPP) techniques. The target of this service is the professional market such as mapping, construction, agriculture or offshore.

- A Signal Authentication service to protect Galileo signals from hacking or spoofing attacks, mainly for critical applications as tracking of dangerous or valuable goods, or synchronisation of power grids or data networks.

This Stakeholder Consultation targets exclusively the Commercial Service High Accuracy (CS HA).

1.3 The European GNSS Agency

The European GNSS Agency (hereinafter 'GSA', 'the Agency') is a European Union regulatory authority formed by the European Union to accomplish specific tasks related to the European GNSS programmes¹. Its strategic objectives include the achievement of a fully operational Galileo system. This includes the laying of foundations for a fully sustainable and economically viable system and its security.

The Agency's key objective is to make Galileo not just a functioning system but also the world's leading satellite navigation system for civilian applications.

1.4 The European Commission

The European Commission has overall responsibility for the Galileo programme, manages the funds allocated to it and oversees the implementation of all programme activities. It provides to the Member States and the European Parliament information pertaining to the Galileo programme, in particular in terms of risk management, cost, revenues, schedule and performance.

For the smooth progress of the deployment and exploitation phases of the Galileo programme the European Commission is tasked² to determine the technical and operational specifications necessary to fulfil the functions related to the offering of the Commercial Service.

1.5 Purpose of this consultation

Ongoing discussions between stakeholders of the Galileo Programme have outlined the opportunity to consider offering the High Accuracy Commercial Service (HA CS) to all interested users on a free of charge basis, with content and format of data publicly and openly available on a global scale.

This approach would increase the public benefit delivered by Galileo, contributing to its positioning in the market as the first GNSS system offering high accuracy services on a free of charge basis.

At the same time, since departing from the scheme originally foreseen by Implementing Decision (EU) 2017/224³ of 8 February 2017, the possibility to provide HA CS on a free of charge and global basis needs to be carefully assessed in many respects.

The results of the consultation may be used to support the change of the Implementing Decision. On this basis, preparation and conduct of a procurement procedure for Commercial Service provision may be initiated by the GSA. For the avoidance of doubt this stakeholder consultation shall not create any obligation on the GSA as to possible follow-up procurements.

Further information on the Consultation background is provided in Annex III.

Please note that:

- the GSA reserves full discretion as to whether and when it will launch an actual procurement for the Commercial Service .

- iii. neither the present consultation nor the answers to it are in any way binding on the GSA in its preparation of the potential procurement documentation– no expectation shall be created or derived whatsoever.

GSA will also take measures to ensure that the opinions expressed in the replies will not unduly bias its procurement and the resulting tender specifications will ensure as wide competition as possible.
